FRENCH CHAMBER CONSIDERING PLAN TO MODIFY TREATY

Motion Introduced Asks Government To Seek To Effect Changes

PREMIER SPEAKS

Purpose Is To Impose Checks On Making Of Munitions

VOTE OCTOBER 4

Americans Still Opposed To Proposed Blockade Of Russia

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Sept. 28.—The following motion was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today by the Peace Commission of the Chamber:

"The Chamber invites the Government to enter into negotiations with the signatories of the treaty of Versailles with a view to the adoption of an addition to the treaty making disarmament of Germany and her allies effective by the prohibition of the manufacture of certain war material and by all measures considered necessary to that end."

M. Clemenceau told the Chamber that the treaty and particularly article 168 sufficiently armed France against German manufacture of war material, by preventing the building of further munitions factories. The Premier concluded his speech by making this point the basis of the demand which he will make for a vote of confidence in the Government. The majority of the members of the Peace Commission approved the Premier's arguments.

The vote on ratification of the peace treaty is expected to take place about October 4.

Paris, September 29.—The drafting committee has presented new proposals to the Supreme Council regarding the suggested peaceful blockade of Bolshevist Russia. The American delegates maintained their objections to the scheme.

Foch's Plan Accepted

Paris, Sept. 29.—The Supreme Council has accepted the resolution submitted by Marshal Foch outlining measures to prevent the unauthorised disposal of air material by the Germans. The Council has decided to insist on Germany handing over the amounts already realised by such unauthorised disposal and has accepted the military representatives' report regarding the distribution of air material among the Allies.

The interest displayed by the Chinese has been greater than had been expected. Many inquires have been received from interior points in China.

Another rush on the final investment day is expected, people generally preferring to be enrolled on an interest-bearing basis rather than to have their money idle another month before it begins earning.

U.S. SHIPS CANCEL BRITISH SAILINGS DUE TO STRIKE

Action Is Taken To Avoid Bunkering Delays In English Ports

TRAFFIC MOVING

Transport Lines Crippled But General Situation Has Improved

NO LACK OF FOOD

Suburban Services Kept Up And London Tubes Are Reopening

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, September 29.—The United States Shipping Board has cancelled all sailings to British ports owing to the British railway strike. It is stated that the Board has taken this step owing to a desire to avoid congestion and bunkering difficulties and to be in line with the action likely to be taken by British shipowners.

Measures Of Government

London, September 29.—At midday today the situation is not materially changed and with the transport workers and busmen still working the element of surprise has not proved so successful as was anticipated. The rationing of foodstuffs and petrol and other drastic Government measures have had a steadifying influence and to the superficial view things have been going on in a limited way much as usual.

But the future holds many uncertainties. The transport workers and busmen are apparently eager to come out in sympathy with the railwaymen and as far as London with its nine millions of concentrated humanity is concerned there is no doubt that an extension of the strike in that direction would to a great extent paralyse the metropolis.

The authorities are of course making every preparation but they are obvious of the limits to their organising powers without the aid of the transport men. But much will depend on the Government's power to maintain some sort of train service, and the outlook in this respect seems to improve. Skeleton services were run this morning on a number of suburban lines. The boat-train from Folkestone was run to time while the Great Western arranged for a number of trunk trains and a fairly representative service is being arranged in the provinces.

Men Not Unanimous

Indications are gradually forthcoming that the rank and file of railwaymen are anything but unanimously keen on the strike. Some firemen, guards and drivers of several railways are at work but their number is negligible.

The question of petrol is of paramount importance at present, when practically the entire transport is dependent on motor and aeroplane. It has been ascertained that there is enough in the country to last for eight or nine weeks and it is considered that there is no cause for immediate anxiety regarding either petrol, coal or food. An emergency scheme had been completed by the Ministry of Food some months ago when an industrial strike threatened and nothing remained on Saturday but to launch it.

The strike if it lasts is bound to have a most serious effect on the Midland and Northern industrial centers, many of which are dependent on a daily renewal of essentials, apart from coal. Many works and colleries have already closed down. A hundred thousand miners in South Wales have had to stop work owing to lack of wagons to remove the coal from the pithead.

Report Is Denied

London, September 29, 7:40 p.m.—The London Brighton and South Coast railway company deny the report that 75 percent of their drivers and firemen have resumed work.

Underground Lines Operate

London, September 29, 6 p.m.—The position on the underground railways is much more hopeful. The electric power station at Chelsea is fully manned by volunteers and trail trips are being run on the District railway and the Hampstead Tube. The renewal of power also enables the Surrey trams to be re-started thus considerably relieving the South of London.

Except on certain truck lines to the North, trains are now running on nearly every railway. It is stated that 75 percent of the London and Brighton company's drivers and firemen have offered to return to work. An official of the Great Western states that the service on that line is nearly normal.

Many up river residents are traveling to and from the city by river.

Troops are being transported to important centers by destroyers, which are also conveying some mails.

The sympathetic strike of fish porters has ended and plentiful supplies of fish are arriving.

In spite of these promising signs, Mr. Bromley, Secretary of the Firemen's and Driver's Union, asserts that the struggle will be very long and severe.

The London Electricians' Union has decided to take no action for the present.

An official statement just issued states: "Traffic conditions are unchanged. More trains are running and an extraordinarily large number of volunteers are coming forward."

7:30 p.m.—Two attempts to wreck trains on the London and Brighton railway by boulders on the line are reported. Soldiers are now guarding the line.

Strikers in Scotland held up two trains. One fireman was injured.

9:40 p.m.—A meeting of the Executive of the Transport Workers' Federation tonight decided to postpone a decision on the strike until tomorrow. There is apparently a strong difference of opinion regarding the question of supporting the railway strike.

Big Improvement Seen

London, September 30, 3:20 a.m.—There was unexpectedly great improvement in the railway services throughout the kingdom yesterday, and more extended running is foreshadowed for today. The reopening of some of the London tubes, thanks to the working of the electric power station and trains by volunteers, will largely relieve the congestion of traffic which was encountered yesterday owing to people having to resort to road and vehicular traffic.

The milk distribution scheme is officially stated to be working satisfactorily. Road transport is improving both in London and in the provinces. The organisation in Hyde Park is running smoothly and all supplies landed there till six o'clock yesterday evening have been redistributed. Flour and bread stocks are being well distributed and the arrangements for distribution of refrigerated and fresh meat are working well.

The Commissioner of Police has issued an appeal to all citizens under forty to enrol as special constables. Special magistrates will attend all police stations today to swear in volunteers.

Two flying-boats left Southampton for Havre yesterday afternoon with passengers and mails. No boats are yet sailing from the docks and food is rotting in the sheds.

After the meeting of the transport workers executive yesterday which lasted 14½ hours, the bus, tram and taximen visited the headquarters of the National Union of Railwaymen and consulted with the executive, after which the men decided to abide by the decision to wait till tomorrow's full meeting. It is stated that Mr. Thomas urged the bus and tram workers to suspend action, and services are apparently assured for today.

No Loss Of Life

London, September 30, 1 p.m.—An official statement just issued says: "The railway services are improving. The schedules prepared by the companies yesterday were exceeded. Yesterday minor acts of sabotage were reported. In one case during the night the red danger lights of certain signals were altered to green. Fortunately there was no loss of life. The necessary steps have been taken.

"The distribution of food continues satisfactory, thanks largely to the admirable spirit and efficient work of volunteers. The offers of volunteer service have been overwhelming. They are being collated as rapidly as possible and calls for service will be issued increasingly from today.

"Railway horses and livestock abandoned by the strikers are being cared for."

The Ministry of Labor states: "In view of the doubts expressed with regard to the position of railwaymen remaining at or resuming work, the Government desires to make it clear that they undertake not only to afford such men every protection during the present crisis but also to safeguard their interests as railwaymen against any measure of prejudice to which they might thereafter be exposed, owing to such action."

3:55 p.m.—The situation continues to improve. The suburban railway services are quite good, while the services to the great provincial centers are improving hourly.

Practically all the trains run in the daytime, owing to the difficulties of signals at night. The London tubes are beginning to reopen. Strikers are reported to be resuming in various centers but apparently the number so far is small.

The Executive of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers has decided that members of the society shall remain at work but not do work previously performed by railwaymen now on strike.

Other Countries Affected

London, September 30.—The railway strike is greatly affecting Italy and France, owing to the smallness of the quantities of coal received from Belgium America and Germany.

British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Yui heard the application for bail, which was made by Mr. Paul M. Linebarger, counsel for the two defendants. Mr. G. D. He was arraigned for taking the purse of a Chinese traveler as the latter was looking in the shop windows on Nanking Road. The purse, found in the man's hand, contained $49. His sentence was 18 months and expulsion. The second took a purse from a shopper's pocket at the Hongkew market but insisted that he had found it on the ground and was merely in the act of returning it. He was sent to jail for one week. The third was observed by the wife of the victim. She gave an alarm so that the man was caught before he could remove his hand. This took place Tuesday evening while the husband was buying tobacco from a Boone Road shop.

Orphanage At Omsk Opened By American Red Cross Is Haven For Hungry Children

Agricultural College Building Converted Into Home For Friendless Youngsters Is In Charge Of Miss Edith Judge

(China Press Correspondence)

Omsk, Siberia, August 15.—One of the most gratifying pieces of American Red Cross work in Siberia is the orphanage at Omsk. Everywhere across Siberia from Vladivostok to the Urals there are children—hungry, dirty, ragged, living a hand-to-mouth existence in germ-infested box cars, under the chilly shelter of a shed or in some crowded, evil-smelling barracks inhabited by other refugees. In the children is the hope of Siberia and Russia. What must be done for them? The American Red Cross knows and has undertaken the task of clothing, feeding, housing, even educating them.

Last winter, when hundreds of starving people sought shelter in any unoccupied building they could find the Red Cross people at Omsk discovered a house of six big rooms in each of which no less than ten families were living. Among them were many penniless orphan children whom unscrupulous people employed as beggars. To save the children from such bad environments, the orphanage was started with forty youngsters, the number rapidly increasing to 76, both boys and girls, ranging from eleven months to sixteen years.

The first house secured for the purpose was in a bad neighborhood and the children often got into the hands of their old associates. A building on the grounds of the Agricultural College now occupied by the Red Cross hospital, was empty as the students who occupied it had been drafted, so permission was secured to occupy it. When the first load of children and furniture was ready to move in, it was discovered that an officer and his family and a woman with six children had also had an eye on the building and already installed themselves. The woman was persuaded to leave, but the man "sat tight," even locking the kitchen and bath until terms were made by which he could remain, having the use of the coveted cooking stove and bath at certain hours each day. Minor details, perhaps, but a typical example of the difficulty of finding living quarters and of the co-operative domesticity that results.

Assisting Edita Yokovlovna, as the children call Miss Edith Judge, the Red Cross worker in charge, were two Russian women, Maria Vassilovna and Emily Evanovna, both of them devoted to their work. There is also a cook who is helped each day by two children, all of whom take turns in the kitchen. Bedmaking, cleaning, scrubbing, mending all are done by the youngsters, boys as well as girls. The older ones also act as mothers to the little tots, feeding, bathing and dressing them. That they feel the responsibility of their charges was illustrated by one little mother, who prior to the weekly inspection said: "Please, Edita Yokolovno, my son needs a clean frock." In addition to the household duties, the children have a daily lesson in reading and writing, and three times a week a man comes who gives them lessons in arithmetic, and singing, which, like all Russians, they love.

Nearly all the boys and girls wear grey or khaki-colored sweaters knitted by the mothers and daughters of America, and the little orphans love the American clothes. A big case full of second-hand garments arrived and, as Miss Judge opened it, the children climbed all over her in their eagerness to see what the box contained. "Help yourselves," she said, and in a minute each child was busy picking out a dress or coat, or helping the others to find what they needed, too. Never have children taken greater pleasure in clothes than these orphans in Siberia.

In the lives of all these children there is tragedy. One boy of sixteen had walked eighty versts looking for work so that he might take care of his two little brothers. When the Red Cross found him, his feet were in a pitiable condition and he was weak from hunger and fatigue. In spite of his condition he worried so about his brothers that he was given money and food to return to the village where he had left them, with instructions to be back at the orphanage the following Sunday. True to his word, he returned but only one boy could be found, as there was not sufficient time to look for the other without breaking his promise. Too sick from his long tramp to make the second trip, he had to be sent to the hospital for medical care, but even then he asked permission to go back to the orphanage for an hour each day so that he could teach the one brother he had found how to read and write.

Another family of five boys was found living in an old railway truck. They had practically no food and were in such rags that they had to be wrapped up in blankets and carried to the automobile that took them to the home. One case, the most pitiable of all, was that of a little girl of four whose mother had died and who was living in a box car with her father, insane from grief. When she asked him for food he beat her and finally other refugees brought the child's plight to the attention of the American Red Cross. When they found her she was too weak to do more than whimper for bread, and the skin was stretched taut over her bones. Miss Judge took off the coat of her uniform and carried the child in her arms to the orphanage, but relief had come too late. The little throat had not even strength to swallow the teaspoonful of milk that the doctor prescribed, and the following day she went to sleep, never to be hungry again.

These are not the children who would be paupers under ordinary circumstances, but their parents have been driven from their homes by the Bolshevists, and from disease and exposure have died, leaving the children to the mercy of fate, hundreds, even thousands of miles from the places where they were born. One child of eleven who swept the market place for ten roubles a day was taking care of her two little sisters and a brother. When the Red Cross offered to look after all four of them, the little mother flatly refused assistance and not until she had been approached several times would she consent to let the little girl and boy go to the home. The other she kept for companionship, demanding a receipt from the Red Cross that they would give back the two they had taken at such time as she was able to return to Samara, and reclaim the land they had abandoned when the city was taken by the enemy.

Under the folds of the Red Cross flag, the children at last are safe, and at any time of the day until the sun goes down you will find them sitting on the steps of the orphanage, listening to the Victrola through the windows of the nurses' home, playing with the convalescent patients at the hospital or carried about in some nurse's arms. All memory of cold and starvation is gone and they are quickly adapting themselves to their new home.

An Iliad Of Eats

By Benjamin de Casseres

The Science Of Eating. By Alfred W. McCann. George H. Doran Company.

I have been reading the Iliad of the lobster, the Paradise Lost of good digestion, the Pilgrim's Progress of the bean, the Inferno of the Welsh rabbit.

The author of this sublime literary mosaic is Alfred W. Hercules McCann, who cleaned out the Augean stables of the food warehouses, garrotted hundreds of professional baby poisoners and took the Nemean lion of food adulteration by his jowls and strangled him before a cheering and grateful public.

The book is titled "The Science of Eating," which is a new and enlarged edition of This Famishing World. It is a book that no human being who eats should be without. If you do not eat, read it for its literary and dramatic quality. It is written by a man who thinks with his fists, writes with his brain—a fearless man writing on a subject of almost universal interest, food.

Mr. McCann is proof again, and definite proof, I hope that the commonplace does not exist for the dramatic imagination. Personally I only use food as a substitute for alcohol; but after reading for five hours into the very stomach of this book I become a food fan, a Fletcher "nut," a Galahad of the perfect meal.

Food is a spiritual essence. It breeds revolutions and cans communes. I understand now how three eggs, cooked three minutes, smeared over a dish of codfish might become by internal combustibility a dynamic thought that might fire the obfusticated domes of a thousand prohibitionists or lay in ashes the staves of all the early morning rug beaters of Flatbush. For chaos or order depends on the quality of our eats.

But whether you believe in this sublime magic or not, it is the style of the book that will linger forever in your brain. Mr. McCann is (please copy, Mr. Publisher) the Blasco Ibanez of the belly, the Victor Hugo of the digestion, the John Milton of starches.

The book is divided into ten cantos. Canto One concerns the "human scrap heap." It is a magnificent prelude to Clean Living, Right Eating, and Red Blood. In the middle of this canto there is a Dance of the Molars.

Canto Two is a personally conducted tour through your tummy and other curious addenda thereabout. There are hints in this canto of the "dark brown taste." Now, we have found the simple lemon squeezed in a cup of cold water to be very effective in teasing back to a state of rationality the breakfast appetite. It is a pity that a man of Mr. McCann's vast food learning has not bespoken the simple four-cent lemon. But we remember the food poisoners he has sent to jail, and withhold criticism.

There's Canto Seven. It is an ode to sugar. Old brown sugar, sugaritis, new white sugar, the honey bee, glucose, glucosities, and so forth. He might have added a chapter here on the influence of sugar on scenario writers and "movie" directors. The "movies" today are the triumph of sweetness over light. How few "movies" show any sign of fish? Fish, properly McCanned, makes phosphorus, and phosphorus makes gray matter.

Canto Eight treats of the "plugged" cow, America's kidneycides and meatology. "Sink your canines into as many bloody, bawdy, kindless steaks as you have a mind to! Grind the juicy cadaver between your molars—if you have any molars!"—thunders our Lohengrin of Lettuce. Oh, you kidneycides, lobster murderers and bean wantons, do you know the Dantesque pickle you are preparing for your older years, when you will be fed on Borden's condensed and strained?

Are you looking into your lactic acid, creative and carbon dioxides? Dare you venture pumpernickel, haggis, lobscouse, scrapple or good old Philadelphia pepperpot without taking thought of that far-off despeptic day toward which all midnight gorgers move?

Well, if you believe eating is a "science," as Mr. McCann contends it is, you will find this the best book ever written on the subject by a man who knows his thesis; but if you believe, as I do, that eating is a pleasure, like loving, reading, golfing and drinking, it won't bother you much.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEPPA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."
A. F. PEELER, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARRISH, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

Story Of The Stars And Stripes

The Dramatic Story Of Old Glory. By Samuel Abbott. New York: Boni and Liveright.

One agrees with James M. Beck, who, in his introduction to this book, says that "Mr. Abbott has done a real service in bringing together all available knowledge with reference to the American flag." It also cannot fail to be, as Mr. Beck hopes, "a potent weapon for a quickened patriotism." The scope of the present volume is stated by the author himself as follows:

"It is curious that, while the record of our flag is one of thrilling, dramatic episodes, no writer has grasped the idea of a book that would give these episodes in their true light, not exaggerated, and linked together in a running narrative. All predecessors in this important field have either written books containing disconnected series of salient related events, or prepared booklets juvenile in atmosphere. Yet there is a story of Old Glory that moves onward majestically and through a chain of associated episodes. To move in current with these episodes has been the plan of the author of this history."

Mr. Abbott begins with the forerunners of Old Glory, with the Pine Tree flag that "went with Arnold and Morgan into the snows of a Maine Winter," the Palmetto flag of the Southern colonies, and other flags of Colonial days. The history of the Union flag dates from 1776, when it was hoisted over Washington's army. A curious error of the historical painter Trumbull is explained by Mr. Abbott:

"In Trumbull's painting, "The Battle of Princeton," we have the Stars and Stripes prominently displayed, although, as the artist knew, it was not adopted by Congress as the National Flag until nearly six months after the date of the battle. He was one of a group of men who frequently included the Stars and Stripes in their word-accounts or paintings of events that happened while the Grand Union Flag was the standard of the Continental Army, before the Stars and Stripes was ever thought of."

One of the most interesting chapters in Mr. Abbott's book is the one devoted to unraveling the "alluring problem" concerning the real inspirer of our present flag. Mr. Abbott presents a new theory, fascinating, if somewhat fantastic, to the effect that it was Franklin who was the real inspirer. However the author is fair to the other theories also, including "the Betsy Ross Tradition" to which he devotes a chapter. Among the "novelties" the book contains are the account of the significance of the raising of Old Glory over Fort Stanwix, the proof of the flag's being unfurled over the camp of the Continental Army on the eve of the battle of the Brandywine and a graphic account of the flag at the front in France. Besides its interest as a sheer narrative this volume should help in the much needed task of Americanisation; it cannot fail to inspire reverence for our national symbol.

HOW TARKINGTON WORKS

By Heywood Broun

It seems to us that Booth Tarkington belongs at the top or thereabouts in American letters. We will be surprised and disappointed if Penrod does not persist for a century or so. And yet much of Tarkington's work is flawed by a curious failing. Almost invariably the novels are carefully thought out to a certain point, and then they weaken. This point occurs, as a rule, within a chapter or so of the end. The story "hangs" as the racetrack reporters express it, in the last few strides. In "Ramsey Milholland," for instance, it seemed to us that Tarkington, after a minute development of a theme, cut it off abruptly. He was, according to our impression, a little tired and anxious to have it over with before he had actually reached the finishing mark. Today we received a story which may provide an explanation. "Booth Tarkington," says a publisher's note from Doubleday-Page, "probably uses more lead pencils than any other writer in America. Always he has disdained a typewriter.

"He works at an artist's drawing table, and," the story continues, "with a little stock of paper before him he then sets about the actual business of composition very slowly, very carefully. Every phrase--almost every word--is pondered, balanced, scrutinised before it is permitted to pass. As often as not a dozen phrases have been rejected before the final one which seems to readers to come so

British Police Court Hears Sailors' Cases

R. Ross, a sailor who lives at the Thomas Hanbury Institute, and F. Perkins, a seaman of the British gunboat Scarab, were arraigned on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct in the British Police Court yesterday before Mr. G. W. King and the Commander of the British gunboat Bee.

Testimony given was to the effect that after Ross and Perkins left two ricshas on Broadway near Astor Road early Wednesday morning Ross attacked a Sikh policeman on duty there and after he had been arrested Perkins interfered and was also taken into custody. The defendants were unable to deny the charges and convictions were entered against them. No penalty was given as it was stated that the two men will be dealt with under the Naval Discipline Act.

Tonight brings "Three Faces East," which is one of Mr. Frawley's most popular plays. For those who were unable to see the piece when produced before, it might be added that "Three Faces East" is a German spy play written by Antony Paul Kelley. A WARNING TO EARLY RISERS.

People who reside in the Tropics, or in any part where Malaria prevails, should avoid going out before the sun has dispelled the morning mists, and also before they have breakfasted. The reasons for this are that the vapours which arise from the earth during the night are frequently malarious, and the system unfortified by the morning meal is especially susceptible to this poison.

The only real safeguard against Malaria, however, is pure rich blood. And when Malaria has entered the system the only method of driving it out is by purifying and enriching the blood. For both these purposes the one proved specific is the World-famous blood tonic Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The testimony of innumerable cured sufferers from Malaria has established the fact that these Pills are a permanent remedy. Their action is prompt, they begin to purify and build-up the blood from the first dose. And as rapidly as the blood gains strength so it expels the Malaria parasites until the whole system is cleansed, strengthened and rejuvinated.

Try them yourself and prove their efficacy. Not only are they invaluable for Malaria, but Anaemia, Debility, Nervousness, Indigestion, Rheumatism and all other forms of illhealth due to weak or vitiated blood have been cured by their use.

Of medicine vendors everywhere, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are also obtainable direct from the China Office of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, $1.50 the bottle, $8.00, for six bottles, post free. A postcard request to the above address will bring you a helpful free booklet "Building up the Blood" by return mail.

Every day your complexion pays toll to dust and wind

The rough, cold winds chap and roughen the skin; dry heated air draws and parches it. The constant strain under which we live—the ceaseless activity of crowded days, the constant effort, the lack of rest—all these things take daily toll of the complexion.

You can protect your complexion from the wear and tear of both summer and winter—can prevent that tired, drawn look from appearing in your face, by giving your skin the care it needs.

Apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream when you motor or travel; rub it in lightly. This will protect the sensitive pores from grit and grime, will keep your skin free from that parched feeling that generally follows exposure to dust and dirt.

It has a wonderfully beautifying effect, and as a base for powder it is so effective that one powdering is sufficient for the whole evening.

This fragrant, dewy cream contains a skin-softening ingredient of great value, one that skin specialists recognize as most efficient in keeping the skin supple, for giving it the transparent freshness everyone admires.

THREE AMERICAN FIRMS OPEN SHANGHAI OFFICES

Allied Organisations Will Deal In General Export And Import Business

Shanghai offices for three closely associated American firms were formally opened yesterday at 1 Kiukiang Road. The firms are Charles T. Stork and Company, Inc., Eugene Boissevain and Company, Inc., and the Stork Contractors Export Corporation. All have their head offices in the Stork Boissevain Building in New York City.

The Stork Company was formed to handle imports from America and will specialise here in machinery, railway and ship-building supplies, factory and mill equipment, chemicals, drugs, textiles and automobiles. The firm has its own automobile factory which produces the Stork-Kar, a medium-priced motor-car.

The Boissevain Company is the Chinese export end of the business and will ship from here oils, hides, furs, bristles, and other products. This concern specialises in ores.

The Stork Contractors' Export Company is a new concern, specialising in building operations, public utility plants and railways and financing such undertakings. It works entirely through local contractors and architects.

The three associated companies have two floors of offices and ample warehouse space at their new premises. Each firm will have its own China manager and a staff is on the way here now from America. Offices have been established in Kobe, Manila, Singapore, and Batavia and branches are planned for Hankow, Tientsin and probably one or two other outports.

Direct Trade Between China And U.S. Urged

Dr. Hsieh, In Shanghai From New York, Advises Against Intermediaries

Direct trade relations between China and the United States without intermediaries, is advocated by Dr. Tehui Hsich, one of the leading Chinese business men in New York, who is here on a business trip. Dr. Hsieh has figured prominently before the Council on Foreign Relations in his fight against Dr. T. Lyenaga, director of the East and West News Bureau of America and understood to be a semi-official spokesman for Tokio. Dr. Hsieh is also a director of the China Society of America, organised in New York in 1911 for crystallising the sympathetic interest of the American people in China. Dr. Hsieh maintains that by establishing direct relationship with the United States, China could get the finished products of America in return for raw products.

Chaplin Film At Apollo

Because of the unprecedented demand for seats, Charlie Chaplin in "Sunnyside" will be screened for three nights more: Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at the Apollo Theater. There will be a matinee on Saturday.

Farm-hand and rural hotel boy is a new role for Chaplin but the versatile and acrobatic Charlie fills the part with great success. Special music by the Apollo orchestra is an important feature of the program.

You want more than weather protection.
The advantage of "Weatherproof Compo" roofing is that it not only gives complete weather protection, but that it gives protection from sparks and embers.
"Weatherproof," means protection in the fullest sense of the word—protection from the elements, protection from sparks, protection from cold and heat, and protection from roof expense. "Weatherproof" is the most economical type of roof you can buy, both in first cost and maintenance. And it costs less to lay—no skilled labor is required.
So many thousands know the advantages of "Weatherproof" that it takes the largest roofing mills in the world to supply the demand.

Banking Service with AMERICA. —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives, with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

America's Duties And Responsibilities

IN an address delivered by Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Board of the Irving National Bank of New York, before the Denver Civic and Commercial Association, we find the most thoughtful and farsighted advice to the American people with regard to their present duty to themselves and to the world that we have yet come across. Mr. Pierson's remarks are specifically applicable to the present industrial chaos in Great Britain and America resulting from the rail and steel strikes.

After pointing out that America, as well as other nations, is now facing the problem of readjustment to conditions produced by the war, Mr. Pierson jumps into his main argument, which has to do with America's duties and responsibilities towards the rest of the world. He says:

"At last we are able to believe that our national interests are inextricably linked with the interests of other nations, and to understand why this should be so. Today we speak of financing nations of the earth in a manner which five years ago would have been entirely incomprehensible either from a humanitarian or a business point of view.

"We have courage, and we certainly have power of production. In the fiscal year ending June 30 our exports amounted to the staggering total of $7,225,000,000—more than our entire exports for the three years preceding the war. As for the excess of exports over imports—our favorable trade balance—this was $4,129,000,000—a billion dollars greater than in any previous year, and greater also than the total balances for all the eight years up to and including 1914. . . .

"Then, too, there is the question of foreign exchange which must be considered and decided at once. Just now the American dollar in every European banking center is at a premium. This means that when the European purchaser buys our goods at prices which are quoted in dollars, and pays for them in his own money or in American dollars exchange purchased with his own money, the loss in exchange which he suffers is so great that he cannot be expected to buy from us more than is imperatively needed. . . .

"If our commercial and industrial activity is to be kept up—and clearly it must be—foreign outlets for our products must not be destroyed by the creation of prohibitive conditions such as are indicated in the foreign exchange situation of the present time. And the rights of common humanity in international commercial intercourse should also receive their share of consideration. It is not exclusively a business question by any means. We have in prodigal abundance all the material things which the rest of the world needs most. The cash and credit and man-power and machine-power required to make these things available to the rest of the world on fair and liberal terms, all are ours. Our amazing wheat crop and our herds of cattle and hogs alone stand between Europe and actual famine. Our steel and copper and coal must supply the scarcity which the war has wrought in every country of Europe, whether belligerent or neutral. Our railroad and factory equipment trades, our bridgebuilders and shipbuilders and builders of factories and homes, must play a major part in the reconstruction of the devastated areas of Europe, which are not confined by any means to France and Belgium.

"Such, then, is something of our obligation to the other countries of the world and to the splendid position we have attained among them through the part we have taken in the war. Now we need full realisation of these things and a method and an organisation—necessarily on a national scale—for mobilising the credit-granting resources of the country and applying them intelligently to the task of financing our sales of indispensable things to a world which has all too little money and, for the moment, no goods to give in exchange. To create such an organisation is easily within the power and the compass of the banking and business community. The establishing and safe-guarding of the necessary credits present no insuperable difficulties, assuming, of course, that we attack the problem presented as sane business men have learned to attack the smaller, but not less difficult problems which come to them in the day's work.

"Nor must we confine our consideration of the credit feature of this world-financing process to the credit methods which have obtained in the past. Our people must learn to invest in foreign securities as a matter of self-interest, if for no higher reason. It always has been recognised as good business to make it possible for a customer to pay his debts without unnecessary strain upon or impairment of his business resources. . . .

"Our duty, therefore, is plain—obvious almost. These wonderful resources we have and the not less wonderful national qualities we possess—the world is willing to concede both to us now—should be co-ordinated in an effort, not governmental perhaps, but at least aided and sanctioned by the Government, towards the most splendid program of humanitarianism and, incidentally, of world business which it has ever been the privilege of any nation to direct. There should be no delay in launching an undertaking so advantageous to our country and so essential to the world's welfare.

"Shall we be able to play up to this part which has been set for us? Almost certainly, yes. But to do it we must utilise the very best that is in us—all of our powers and resources. World vision and charity we must have, but also steadiness and the power of discrimination. Our world benefactions, if such they are to be called, should be bestowed with an intelligent consideration of the merits of the different requests for relief which will come to us from so many parts of the world. After all, our experience with the world is still young, while in the ways of the world and its widely differing points of view, we are not in the least well schooled. We still have the bad habit of reading our own characteristics into the peoples of other nations, peoples to whom our characteristics are still puzzling and quite likely to be misunderstood.

"To do anything like justice either to our own possibilities or to the world situation which calls for our sympathy and action, it will be very important that we keep our own house in order. Industrial quarrels and armed truces and threats of strikes and lock-outs are but poorly suited to the accomplishment of the task before us. Just because our national activities are moving along more smoothly and more rapidly than those of sorely war-stricken nations, we should not delude ourselves with the belief that our problems are essentially less serious than theirs. We were not so deeply hurt as they, hence our power of reaction towards peace activities asserted itesIf more quickly than theirs. Our people and our industries wasted no time in getting back to work and turning out the products which other nations now need so badly. They have necessarily been slow in restoring their shattered productive agencies and getting under way.

"It may be that certain aspects of the European situation are worth studying because they exhibit intensive phases of problems which we also must solve on our own account and in our own way. Just as the sinister reign of the Bolshevik oligarchy in Russia has taught the world the dangers and mad extravagances inherent in state socialism, with its denial of property rights and disregard of the functions of capital and managing ability in business, so England's sluggish resumption of industrial activity is a striking demonstration of the truth that employers and employes must think together and work together for the common end if production is not to languish and prosperity not to depart.

"It is not easy to grasp the bigness, the seriousness of our present situation. History is filled with instances of unusual distinctions being conferred upon individuals and nations. It is safe to say that there is "nothing new under the sun" either in human relationships or otherwise. Still it does seem that somehow our nation and our people find themselves just now in a position, the like of which is difficult to find in all history. We seem to have everything which could be desired—youth, national health, unparalleled prosperity, a background without a flaw, the respect of all nations, the actual friendship of most of them, and not least important because it is a human world in which we live, strategic advantages, full exercise of which not only will operate to our benefit and credit but will make most of the nations of the world the beneficiaries of our commercial and industrial activities.

"But the law of compensation holds good in this as in other situations. It would be difficult to imagine an advantage we posses under present circumstances which is not accompanied by a correspondingly grave responsibility. It would be nearly impossible to imagine any honor coming to us through proper administration of our world stewardship which would be more conspicuous or more ineffaceable in history than the disgrace we would suffer if our leaders in the Government and in business failed to recognise our national responsibility or to fulfil its requirements."

The Actors' Strike In America

(The Literary Digest)

Hardly any strike has been accompanied by more histrionic features than that carried out by the actors; yet hardly any has created more mystification in the public mind over the real causes. Of course the actors know and the managers know; but amid all the emotional demonstrations that have puzzled while they have fascinated, the public has wondered why a settlement couldn't be reached. Grievances not many are mentioned; and managers are reported to announce that they are ready to meet the grievances and correct them. "Time for overtime" was an actor slogan which meant a demand for extra salary for all performances in excess of eight a week, the overtime pay being estimated as one-eighth of the weekly salary. Such modest demands covered the question of grievances until the strike had run its course for several days and the striking body had been enlarged by the addition of chorus girls, who had grievances not suffered by those who are called "legitimate" actors. In their cases long periods of rehearsal without pay have been demanded, and these were now to be cut down to four weeks. In addition, the girls were to be relieved of the obligation of paying for their shoes, stockings, and tights, which at the present high cost of commodities can be figured as not a small expense. The salary of the chorus girl is reputed to be from $25 to $30 a week.

The great bone of contention is the position of the Actors' Equity Association, which has been in existence for six years and whose membership has been enormously swelled since the beginning of the strike. This association, according to a public statement of its founder, Mr. Howard Kyle, was the framer of the contract held between its members and the various managers. For disputes over contracts the Actors' Equity sought to appear for its members. This the managers refused to entertain, and forthwith organised a United Managers' Protective Association, each member of which bonded himself to forfeit $10,000 if he breached any agreement made by his organisation. The first agreement that seems to have been made was a refusal to recognise the Actors' Equity Association. Meantime the latter, having affiliated itself with the Federation of Labor, at once instituted the strike tactics of labor organisations and began by ordering certain of its members rehearsing with the company of "Chu Chin Chow" to walk out. Forthwith the fat was in the fire. Night after night saw the strike spreading to actors in other plays in New York, with sympathetic demonstrations in Chicago and Boston, met, however, by injunction proceedings on the part of managers. As the list of striking actors grew in New York, a huge suit for violation of contract was filed by the managers, in which document appeared the names of scores of leading members of the theatrical profession. Offers of mediation and pacification were not wanting. The actors put forth so distinguished jurists as Charles E. Hughes and Wiliam H. Taft, as arbitrators, but the managers retorted that there was nothing to arbitrate. All along they have been understood to be willing to meet demands for the adjustment of grievances, but have refused to deal with or recognise the Actors' Equity Association as a factor in disputes. The public statement issuing from the managers under the signature of Arthur Hopkins, and printed in New York papers, declares that the Actors' Equity Association "has ceased to be the representative of the actor and has become his dictator." It goes on:

"A member of the Actors' Equity Association can no longer freely enter into any contract with a manager, which he is certain of fulfilling. His first obligation is to the Actors' Equity Association. He signs an oath and gives a bond that at all times he will abide by the dictates of the Association. If he is ordered to break a contract, he will break it or be expelled from the Association and called a scab.

"The contract between actor and manager ceases to be a contract between two parties. The Actors' Equity Association is the third party and the predominant one. No matter how profitable and pleasant the relations between the individual actor and manager may be, these relations are at all times exposed to immediate destruction by a third party. The Actors' Equity Association has demonstrated that it will not hesitate to destroy those relations. The present strike is a complete demonstration of that fact. The hundreds of actors working peacefully under the Actors' Equity were ordered out at an hour's notice. Great havoc and great suffering were wrought at the Equity Association's nod.

"The theatrical business is unlike most others. It is built on special unique and individual service. The peaceful continuation of this service must be removed from any danger of interference or there can be no theater. The Producing Managers' Association wants to deal with the actors collectively as to the form of contract. It welcomes any organisation of actors whose fundamental principle shall be the fulfilment under all conditions of the individual contract.

"The Producing Managers' Association again offers, with any dependable actors' organisation, to submit matters of contract fulfilment to a joint board of actors and managers, with an outside umpire. The Producing Managers' Association will bind itself to stand always on the one great fundamental, that the theater can only live when contracts between individuals are supported in their enforcement by every agency of the theater.

"Bring us an actors' association that is founded on the same principle. We will offer it a form of contract that is better than the former Actors' Equity Association contract. But it must be an organisation in which the managers have faith. It can not be the Actors' Equity Association. The Actors' Equity Association has proved that for all time."

The actors' side of the case seems not to be covered by the simple statements of grievances to be redressed. A letter from the executive secretary of the Actors' Equity, Mr. Frank Gillmore, answers a New York Times editorial comment that "if the actors had rested their case on the claims thus stated, they must eventually have won." Mr. Gillmore said that "to rest" would have been "suicide." For—

"Weeks ago the managers bound themselves with $10,000 apiece to discontinue the old form of contract in which the Actors' Equity Association was recognised. From that date they issued only their own form, and fear and poverty were driving some of our people to sign it, thus losing us members daily. Who can doubt that within a few months seventy-five percent of the actors would have been forced to give in to what would have appeared to them to be the inevitable. Our people begged us to act before it was too late, and when the vote to strike was put there was not one dissenting vote."

On Saturday, August, 16, after the strike had been two weeks' old, the actors having been joined by stage hands and musicians, seventeen New York theaters were darkened. Mr. Charles C. Shay, President of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving-Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, controlling 125,000 members, entered as a factor. As the New York Times reports:

"President Shay, of the Stage Employes, said that he and a representative of the musicians had argued with the managers for two hours recently and had pleaded with them to confer with a representative of the Actors' Equity Association. He pointed out to the managers that the actors did not ask a 'closed shop' or make any radical demands, but merely for a conference with one of their representatives. He said that the managers were not called on to do any more than other large employers of labor have done.

"'I asked the managers not to make our position untenable,' he added, significantly."

Resulting from this is an additional manager's statement:

"Dear Mr. Shay: It is with much regret that the Producing Managers' Association is unable to accept the suggestion of the Theatrical Mechanics' Union, and the Musicians' Union, of a conference with the Actors' Equity Association. You assure us in advance the Actors' Equity Association will ask of us no stipulation to employ only its members. The events of the past ten days have demonstrated that though the Actors' Equity Association does not now expressly demand the employment of none but its members, recognition of the Association would automatically create this condition in the theater.

"The methods employed by this Association in the past ten days have proved this beyond a doubt. The intimidating, browbeating, threatening, and coercion of actors, the public threats that no member of the Association would ever appear on any stage with any actor at present living up to his contract the extraordinary third-degree methods employed to intimidate actors from fulfilling engagements for which they were under contract, the countless impositions on personal right, comfort, and safety, prove to us beyond all doubt that no actor's life or career in the theater would be possible, if he refused to ally himself with and be dictated to by the Actors' Equity Association.

"This condition we believe would be the death of the theater, and we must oppose this to the last. . .

"We have no hostility to labor organisations, or to those forms of it which have proved themselves adaptable to conditions existing in the theater. Our agreeable relations with your organisations for the past twenty years are proof of this.

"We realise that this step may mean a severance of relations between us and our stage crews and musicians. We regret this deeply, yet there is consolation in the fact that our fight is your fight and that if we succeed in saving the theater from being throttled it will be a guaranty of long employment for your people."

Legal opinion, voiced by ex-Attorney-General G. W. Wickersham, declares the actors to be within their legal rights. Many newspapers, looking on, seem to say, "Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung." Here is "one 'labor' war," says the St. Paul Pioneer Press, "the public can watch with comparative equanimity and with an interest rather in the merits of the struggle than in its own suffering or inconvenience." "Here at last is a strike that will have no effect on the cost of living," says the Indianapolis News, restating in other words a sentiment of The Pioneer Press that "the thea-

Production In The Sea

A highly interesting report by Dr. C. G. J. Petersen, a Norwegian scientist, describes the methods and results of recent work on the evolution of the bottom fauna and flora of the sea in the Kattegat, Limfjord, and elsewhere. Often the bottom consists of a "black malodorous mass of sulphurous mud," and it was difficult to imagine that animals could utilise this as food. Sampling this by means of a glass tube thrust down into it, it was however seen that there was a thin surface layer of quite different composition, gray or brown in color, and charged with vegetabble remains. Oysters and other bivalves and demersal worms do not feed on the black mud or on the plankton in the water, but "stuff themselves with this upper layer of fine detritus." "The great bulk of the bottom animals are, and must necessarily be, herbivorous." They mostly burrow in the mud, but a large number are attached to solid objects, stones and shells. The survey being a quantitative one, an attempt is made at an actual estimate of the aggregate mass of life in the whole Kattegat.

Telepathy Gives Wide Field For Study

By Garrett P. Serviss

Five Bostonians, who have been puzzled by the performances of a "mental telepathist" in a theater in their town, collectively sign their names to a letter containing the following double question: "Is mental telepathy an actual transmission of thought from brain to brain; and if it is why do not the governments of civilised countries foster the study of this wonderful art."

The scientific mind is inclined to reject, or at least to regard as illusory, any alleged phenomena which cannot be explained through already known natural laws of action. As soon, however, as a reasonable indication appears of a possible extension of natural action beyond previously assumed limits, the same mind is usually ready to examine the evidence on which the new phenomena rest, and to admit, as a working hypothesis, that they may be genuine and real.

I think that telepathy has arrived at this stage. There are sufficient indications that such things as sound, touch and eye-sight do not include all the means by which one mind may communicate with another to make the hypothesis of the existence of some more subtle means of communication tenable.

It is tenable, from a scientific point of view, because it does not go beyond the realm of physical or material control. It simply assumes that the brain is capable of transmitting and receiving and of interpreting in terms of thought vibrations of the ether which are not the same as those that produce the sensation of light.

The late Sir William Crookes suggested that the waves conveying telepathic messages might be smaller and quicker than those which form the X-rays. Such waves would have no effect upon the eye or upon the ordinary senses. But the cells of the brain, through some yet undetected mechanism, might respond to them. They would thus afford the most subtle of all connections between intelligent beings. And yet there would be nothing "supernatural" about the phenomena. There is no necessity for supposing the waves to be actuated by "disembodied spirits." They are the product of living brains and affect only living brains.

"Is telepathy an actual transmission of thought from brain to brain?" No more than a telephone or telegraph message is an actual transmission of thought. No more than a ray of sunshine is an actual transmission of heat or light. What is really transmitted in any of these cases is a train of vibrations, which are finally, at the end of a series of transformations, interpreted by the brain in the terms of certain sensations, according to their length and frequency.

As to encouraging the study of telepathy, it will be done just as soon as mankind in general has made up its mind that there really is such a thing as telepathy, and that it is a useful form of intercommunication. The great scientific body which leads the education of the world must first have convinced itself on this subject. When that has been done—if it ever is done—the public conviction will not linger behind.

But it might be that so free and full a means of communication between all minds as a perfected and fully developed system of universal telepathy would provide would by no means suit the needs and exigencies of human life. Thoughts would lie too open. It would be all but impossible to have any secrets. Human nature would have to be made over and straightened out before it could face such a situation as that. Crooked schemers would have no occupation left.

Hidden prejudices, dislikes, hatreds, jealousies, envies, evil intentions, malevolence, concocted surprises, meditated attacks, would lie exposed. It would be not "a word and a blow," but a thought and a blow. As in Hands Christian Andersen's story of "The Goloshes of Fortune," everybody could walk inside everybody else's heart, and the spectacles seen would very rarely promote feelings of brotherhood and respect.

In a word, I do not think that it is either probable or desirable that telepathy will, or should, become a generally practised "art" in our lifetime, whatever the undiscernible future may have in store.

Poisoning By Ptomaines

By Brice Belden, M. D.

The ptomaine known as tyrotoxicon causes the "milk poisoning" observed in cases of "Summer troubles" in children. It also accounts for cheese poisoning and ice cream poisoning, and for poisoning by frozen custards and cream-puffs. The re-freezing of ice cream tends to develop tyrotoxicon. The symptoms are nausea, vomiting, a sense of constriction in the throat, griping intestinal pains, headache, chilliness, dizziness and sometimes purging. Exhaustion may supervene, with low temperature, coma, collapse and death.

Meat poisoning may cause violent symptoms, such as vomiting, intense colicky pains, purging, fever, rapid pulse, nervous prostration, cramps in the calves of the legs and great muscular weakness. Later the temperature may fall below normal and there may be extreme depression, convulsive movements, vertigo, dimness of vision, shortness of breath, stupor, soreness of the mouth, collapse and death. The death rate runs rather high in meat poisoning. Meat poisoning resembles poisoning by arsenic very much.

Tainted meats, as mince-meat warmed over, veal pie, carelessly kept chicken salad, badly preserved and canned meats, partially decayed sausages and diseased raw or partially cooked meat are especially apt to cause poisoning.

Prolonged cooking does not necessarily destroy the ptomaines in infected meats. Fresh meat that has been thoroughly cooked may become infected just the same as raw, if kept under bad conditions.

Fish poisoning is due to the development of ptomaines in tainted preserved and canned fish, eels, oysters, mussels, crabs and lobsters. There are sometimes marked manifestations, resembling cerebro-spinal meningitis, convulsions and paralysis being conspicuous symptoms. There may be dryness and constriction of the throat, dizziness, labored breathing, disturbed vision, jerky speech or loss of voice, rapid pulse, numbness, coldness of the extremities, dilated pupils, inability to control various muscle groups, collapse and death.

In some cases there may be cholera-like symptoms. In others there may be redness and itching of the skin, with hives. Delirium and a livid color have also been noted.

ter is not a necessity—except to actors and managers." The Philadelphia Inquirer sees "a curious illustration of the general unrest," adding:

"A few years ago the idea that any body of professional people could ally itself with the trades unions for the purpose of enforcing demands upon employers would have seemed fairly incredible. But in these days the distinctions between the various classes of workers are breaking down.

"So far as the dispute between the actors and the managers goes, public sympathy would naturally incline to the former. In spite of the large salaries (often magnified by rumor) which some actors get, the profession as a whole is not overpaid. What the Actors' Equity Association is fighting for is a fairer form of contract. It certainly is not fair that actors should rehearse for weeks without being paid, that they should be called upon for extra performances without compensation, or that they should be liable to peremptory discharge in the middle of a season, with little prospect of securing a new engagement.

"Whether this strike will advance their interests depends in a great measure upon the attitude of the public. It may be said that the managers have not made themselves especially popular. On the other hand, audiences suddenly deprived of an expected pleasure and put to inconvenience as well might not improbably vent their displeasure upon the immediate cause. One thing may be taken for granted—that the losses which will fall on both managers and actors if the strike is continued will be an important factor in forcing a speedy agreement."

The Evening World (New York) thinks it wrong and unfair "to criticise actors for uniting to gain advantages in treatment and pay because it puts them down to the level of workingmen:

"The progress of 'organisation' must logically lead to the combination of all sorts of wage-earners if they are to save themselves from the exactions of those who have already combined. There is no other way out. To assume that labor organisations can go on unchecked by law, or some sort of self-protective opposition, is out of the question. The undefended can not stand it, and they naturally follow object lessons. School teachers are already well put together. Other public employes are rapidly uniting. Underpaid clergymen might quite properly form a Gideons' band and hold up the parsimonious congregation. There is no good reason why they should not."

CHINESE GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS

Tenders for the supply of S. A. Forms.

Tenders are invited for the supply of the annual requirements of certain forms for station use. A schedule of the forms in question, giving full particulars of the quantities, sizes and qualities of paper required, can be obtained on application to the undersigned.

2. It is to be clearly understood that the quantities to be supplied as mentioned in the schedule are only estimated quantities. The actual requirements may vary from the estimates. Quantities largely in excess of specified requirements may unexpectedly be found necessary, and must be supplied during the term of the contract at the rates given in the accepted tender or tenders.

3. The prices of all forms must be quoted in dollar currency as accepted locally.

4. Each contract will be in force for a period of 1 year commencing from the 1st December, 1919.

5. Sealed tenders marked "Tenders for S.A. Forms" must be sent to the undersigned not later than 3 p.m. on the 6th October, 1919, at which time all tenders received will be opened.

6. The Chinese Government Railways do not bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender. They also reserve the right to accept any tender in part only.

7. A deposit to safeguard the faithful execution of the terms of the contract will be required before an order is placed with the successful tenderer or tenderers. The amount will be determined at the time of placing a contract. The deposit will not exceed 10% of the total estimated value of the forms to be supplied by the Contractor.

8. The working proofs of the forms must be submitted to the person authorized to deal with them, and be approved by him before they are struck off.

9. No modifications in the size or quality of paper specified for each form or in the style of type used in the specimen copies, must be made, except with the consent of the proper authority, previously obtained in writing. Forms supplied in contravention of this proviso will be rejected at the expense of the Contractor.

10. All supplies must be delivered in equal half-yearly instalments to each Railway concerned, before the 15th December, 1919, and 15th June, 1920 respectively. Supplies must be packed and sent to each Railway concerned direct by the Contractor.

11. It is to be understood that the sending in of a tender is to be construed as an acceptance of all the above stipulations.
